

Sindhu People of the Mahabharata, an Archeological View by Potluri Rao In Seattle ©2018 (CC BY 4.0)

The people of the Epic Mahabharata were Sindhu (DNA R1a) the recent Europeans, not Hindu (DNA F). Hindu lived only in the Peninsular India for 60,000 years. They avoided the Himalayas and the Indus river like the plague.

Four thousand years ago, Eastern Europeans (R1a) moved to the North Bactria, and Central Europeans (R1a1) moved to the South Bactria (Avesta). The Z93 were a subgroup of the R1a1. They were con artists. They invented fictional rituals called Vedas and Yajna to rob people. They were considered unethical and immoral people unworthy of living in a civilized society, and were expelled to Kashmir. The Greeks were also con artists who invented fictional rituals called Idolatry to rob people. The Greeks put the Z93 refugees on their payroll to invent fictional rituals to promote Idolatry. The Z93 were re branded as Brahmin. The Greeks invented a new language called Sanskrit as a mixture of only the Avestan of Brahmin and Grandhika of Hindu. All the Sanskrit (Grandhika + Avestan) literature was Greek financed Brahmin invented fictional stories to market Greek Idolatry. The Mahabharata was Z93 culture. It had nothing to do with Hindu. It was falsely promoted as Hindu culture.

